DUFF BUILDING - NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

ON THE COVER

Some time ago the Wayside Inn in Sudbury, Mass. burned. This Inn, made immortal by Henry W. Longfellow in "Tales of the Wayside Inn" and so rich in the history of early New England, is now in the process of restoration by the Ford Foundation. Our cover photo shows the exterior of the building as it now appears. Great pains have been taken in the rebuilding in order to recreate the Inn just as it was originally. Great oak beams have been hand hewn and brought in from New Hampshire forests to form the frame. Over the many years, the Inn was altered by additions and outside changes, and we understand that the rebuilding follows the original lines. From the outside it is now hard to imagine that anything has ever changed. Henry Ford, while living, had great interest in this historical place in Sudbury. Near the Inn, is a little red one room schoolhouse. It is the same schoolhouse that Mary's little lamb followed her to. Complete with benches, pot bellied stove and dunce's cap it was brought to its present location. On the hill overlooking the schoolhouse is the beautiful little colonial church pictured. It gleams white in the sun with its beautifully proportioned tower reaching for the heavens. Just down the road stands the old grist mill. As these pictures were taken the great water wheel was being turned by the stream flowing over the dam. Inside flour was being ground by the great millstones. This was no demonstration. The flour is ground commercially for Pepperidge Farm bread. Sudbury is easily reached from Mattapoisett. It's a beautiful ride particulary in this

VISITING FROM MARYLAND

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allen of Dundalk, Maryland are vacationing in Mattapoisett this week. They are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dexter of Prospect Road, Mattapoisett. Mr. Allen expressed interest in the Presto Mayflower pictures, as he and Mrs. Allen plan to visit the ship as they return home through New York.

ILL AT HOME

JOSEPH HAMMOND

Mr. Joseph I. Hammond, known as Capt. Joe in Mattapoisett died suddenly on October 1st after a scalloping trip. Known by all townspeople, Mr. Hammond had a deep love of the sea. When he arrived at the town wharf in the spring you could call the season officially opened. His home was the old Mendell house on Main Street, Mattapoisett.

Mr. Hammond's whole life was spent on the sea. He received his early training on the Massachusetts Nautical Training ship "The Enterprise". He was on "The Colon", the first ship of its kind to go through the Panama Canal, a Panama Line Panama Railway Co. Ship owned by the United States government.

Chairman for the local area is Mrs. Beatrice E. Scott, and her committee are Raynor M. Gifford, Maurice A. Fuller, Hiram E. Gould, Leslie P. Lawton, Dr. Gabriel Farrell and Arthur Lionberger. Mrs. Henry Tavares is serving as secretary this year and Mrs. Joseph A. Chamberlain will serve as treasurer and will do the publicity of the SPCC in Rochester.

The MSPCC is the only statewide non-sectarian social agency in Massachusetts, organized in 1878 to protect children suffering from neglect or substandard care. It seeks to prevent children from growing up in unwholesome circumstances which lead to delinquency or crime.

The Society now in its seventy-eighth year, differs from other social agencies as the Society acts only upon receipt of a complaint. The Society continues to act until such time as conditions are improved and satisfactory for the children involved. MSPCC caseworkers seek to correct situations by first helping parents to recognize the factors of neglect and the effect upon children. Court action is taken only when parents are unable or unwilling to change their conduct or cooperate in removing the elements of neglect. The Society is the only social agency which, by charter, is constituted to assist "in the enforcement of existing laws affecting the children".

Last year, nearly 13,000 children were referred to the attention of the Society throughout the State. Nearly 50 percent of the homes investigated were found to be broken by reason of death, desertion or divorce, or of the institutional care of one or both parents.

FALL BOUQUET FOR THE HOME

If you enjoy color in your home you can make a lasting centerpiece using Fall foliage. Here are some tips on making such a decoration which will last and will not harm the tree from which you cut the spray.

Never cut more than two feet of branch from the tree. Always cut the branch using pruning shears or knife and always cut on a diagonal. A 45 degree angle is easy to remember and cut. When you have your branch at home make 3 or 4 vertical slashes in the base of the branch about 2 inches long. To preserve the branch for a long time put it in a solution of $\frac{1}{2}$ glycerin and $\frac{1}{2}$ water. The depth of the solution should allow the branch to be covered to 2 inches above the slashes. Leave it for 3 weeks. It should be preserved for a long time. You can also press your branch between newspaper pages using a weight, or you can varnish with a clear varnish. These two methods will not be as long lasting.

Fall is coming early this year because of the drought. Nature, in order to restore moisture to the trees, is causing the leaves to fall. This will allow the roots of the tree to restore its moisture. The color of the leaves is caused by chemicals which are triggered by the frost. For instance, the same chemical that makes beets red makes the red of the leaves.
